

DEMOCRATIC NEWSLETTER OCTOBER 2009

Message From The Chairs:

...Congressman Ron Kind announced that he will not seek the office of Governor but will continue to serve the Third Congressional District. We know that this was a difficult decision for Congressman Kind. He has put the needs of the Third Congressional District ahead of all other considerations.

"My job is to stay focused on the health care reform that's pending so that we deliver affordable, quality, accessible health care for all Wisconsin families," he said. "I've a primary responsibility to do this job well." Thank you, Ron, for your work on our behalf.

If you missed the Sept. General Meeting you missed a great speaker!!! Mike McCabe gave us much to think about regarding money in politics. He asked that we contact Thanks to those who marched in the Oktoberfest parade!

The Cost of Inaction on Health Care Reform

The following is information from Alice Germond of the Democratic National Committee which could be used in discussing health care reform.

As the debate continues over what the final version of health insurance reform will look like, it is critical to remember one thing: inaction is not an option. The cost of doing nothing is too high.

The Robert Wood Johnson foundation released a new report underscoring that cost. The report found: "if federal reform efforts fail, over the next decade in every state, the number of uninsured will increase, employer-sponsored coverage will continue to erode, spending on public programs will balloon and individual and family out-of-pocket costs could increase by more than 35 percent."

Even under the best case scenario, the Foundation's analysis predicts an incredible economic strain on individuals and businesses in every state and the District of Columbia if reform is not enacted.

Under the worst case scenario, the results would be devastating. If we fail to enact reform:

~ In 29 states, the number of uninsured would increase by more than 30 percent.

~ The number of people without insurance could increase by at least 10 percent in every state. The number of uninsured Americans would reach 65.7 million.

~ The cost to individuals and families would increase significantly over the next 10 years - from $326.4 billion this year to $548.4 billion in 2019.

~ Out-of-pocket costs for families and individuals would increase by 35 percent in every state.

~ Rising costs would also continue to hurt businesses - their premiums would continue to increase, more than doubling in 27 states.

~ In the very best case, employers would see premium costs increase by more than 60 percent in nearly every state.

~ Employer-based coverage would continue to erode in every state. In half the country, employer-based coverage would fall by more than 10 percent.
